According to the American Trucking Association (ATA), there is currently an estimated shortage of 120,000 qualified truck drivers now and studies indicate that due to the "Baby Boomers" retiring, and the new "Compliance Safety Accountability" (CSA) Program, that was implemented in 2010, the demand for new Truck Drivers will continue to increase.

Currently from coast to coast there are literally thousands of tractors sitting idle in company yards because there are not enough qualified drivers.

This shortage of qualified drivers has created such a demand that many companies are willing to pay your tuition or offer tuition reimbursement if you pay for your training up front.

In addition to these two options, many individuals qualify for some type of Government funding.

Many other carriers are beginning to jump on the TDDA band wagon in sending students for training primarily due to the reputation Truck Dynasty Driving Academy, L.L.C., has developed in turning out qualified student drivers.
